The VICTORY

By PETER CLARK MACFARLANE.
(Copyright, 1910, by the Pearson Publishing Co.)

"What?" Bolan had gasped, helplessly, open-mouthed. "What?"
"You have won the strike," Martin was saying. "The bosses have granted everything—everything!" The evenness was all gone from his voice. Its vibrant tones were leaping outward and upward in magnificent crescendo. "Everything!" he shouted. "Every-thing—Recognition of the union!—Wages!—Hours!—Conditions!"
Snatching a paper from his pocket, he waved it before them. "Here's the scale," he shouted. "They signed it half an hour ago. It's fixed for three years—three years!" His voice rang out exultantly.

And then the men woke up. With a roar like the voice of Niagara and a movement like a thousand human springs uncoiled at once, they leaped to their feet. They flung hats and caps in the air. They stamped. They climbed upon chairs. They screamed like madmen. They hugged each other. They laughed and wept. They waited. They waved their arms. They yelled themselves hoarse. Cheer after cheer was lifted. The men upon the platform leaped up and pressed round. McKichie reached for the document Martin was waving. He and Kaufman scanned it and were convinced. Some of the men tottered and sat down, weak with joy. Some rushed about the hall. Some dashed out of the building and ran like madmen for their homes.

In the street the cry was raised. "The strike is ended!" The long, echoing pean floated upon the air: "We win! We win! We win!"
What is it that brings a woman near, as if by instinct, in the great crisis of a man's life. Suddenly one appeared, dodging excitedly amid the whirling throng. Her face was flushed with running. Wisps of chestnut hair had broken away and swept the scarlet spots upon her cheeks. Her dress was cheap and poor, but clung to her hurrying figure with a kind of grace that was attractive. That indescribable charm with which love may invest a face that is plain and care-marked was hers. John swooped down with his strong arms, and lifted her up. "John! John!" she exclaimed, kissing him rapturously. "You won it, and you won it square!"
"You bet, Jennie," he responded, proudly, returning her kisses with frank gusto, and the honest look of absolute sincerity. "How's Jack and Tommy?"
"Fine," she answered.
But the men were crowding round again.

"How'd you do it, Jack?" asked McKichie, with honest admiration, unchanged in the joy of victory, no matter how near he had come to committing the men to a grievous mistake.
"I just went up to Chicago, put in a bid and grabbed off that big canal contract myself," he answered, laughing with excitement and sheer joy. "Say, they was the maddest bunch of hornets you ever saw in your life. I had as good a right to bid as any of 'em, and take my chance on subletting, which was what they was going to do. Had my bondsmen right ready to go, and they couldn't say a word. Besides, they calmed down considerable when they found I was willin' to turn over the whole contract to them if they'd agree to recognize the union and sign our scale for three years. They pow-wow'd a lot on the train comin' down, but finally they fell over their selves to sign up."
"But you had to have a certified check for fifteen thousand to accompany your bid?"
"I had it," answered Martin, with a glowing smile of self-satisfaction, while the round and wondering eyes of the men grew rounder and more wonder-ful still.

Outside, the block in front of union headquarters was filled with wildly jubilant men, from curb to curb. On the nearest cross street a motor car with two men in it had been stopped by the press of the crowd. One of the men was Medros, of Medros, Scanlan & Co., who were to have put in the winning bid. The other was Lafferty. Medros was grumpily reciting the events of the day.
"So that's what he took our fifteen thousand for," snarled the crestfallen Lafferty, "to accompany his bid against us for the contract. I thought that bloke was doin' an awful lot of thinkin' when I was explaining the canal deal to him. But the bond!" he gasped after a moment of further reflection. "How in blazes did he get the surety companies to agree to go on his bond?"
"Just talked 'em into it, I guess, same as he does everybody he goes up against. I even heard since I got back to town that he talked old Fritz Kreider into lending him eight thousand dollars to meet his payroll with yesterday. Come to think, I reckon Fritz must have helped him with the bonding companies. That Dutchman is more of an old woman than he is a banker, if a fellow just happens to get under his vest right, you know."

Lafferty showed disconsolately at the end of an unlighted cigar. "And he's done us out of the fifteen thousand," he mumbled. "Darned if I see, though, how the fellow can be crooked and straight at the same time."
"Oh, he stung you like a bunch of bees," sneered Medros.
At this stage of the conversation Martin appeared from the stairway of the hall, borne on the shoulders of enthusiastic men. He was protesting good-naturedly, but yielding somewhat to the hilarious spirit that had broken out, naturally enough, with the news of the victory. From his elevated position he made out the occupants of the motor car, and when the occasion allowed, slipped to the ground and made his way across to it.

"You double crossed me!" Lafferty roared.
"I told you the strike would be declared off to-night," Martin answered, shouting to be heard, "and it has been."
A sickly pallor crawled over Lafferty's face, and he voiced his disgust with.
"Well, I'm damned!"
"Besides," continued Martin, as he fished an envelope from his pocket, and from it extracted a folded bit of paper with perforated edges, "here's your money. I don't need it any more."

FOUR WOMEN BEFORE COURT

Aftermath of Last Week's Police Activity Requires
Mass of Testimony—Decision to Come Wednesday.

The cases growing out of a police raid on a disorderly house in the downtown section occupied the attention of the recorder's court from 10 o'clock yesterday morning until 4 in the afternoon. The decision will be rendered Wednesday.

A mass of evidence was taken in the case. Thirty witnesses were called and some were on the stand for long intervals. Chief of Police Moore was the star witness for the prosecution and told an interesting tale of how he learned the alleged nature of the place and brought about the arrest of the four women.

A heavy cold in the lungs that was expected to cure itself has been the starting point in many cases of disease that ended fatally. The sensible course is to take frequent doses of BALLARD'S HOREHOUND SYRUP. It checks the progress of the disorder and assists nature to restore normal conditions. Price 25c, 50c and $1.00 per bottle. Sold by Elvey & Hullett's Pharmacy.

A FAMOUS HOSTELRY.

In every city there is one hotel known far and wide as THE hotel of that place. In Phoenix, that hotel is the Hotel Adams. The new building is a vast improvement on the old inn, and all the notables who have stopped within its hospitable walls since its opening last fair time, have remarked on the beauty of the edifice, the excellence of the service and its general convenience.

A LANDMARK.

The people who have been coming to Phoenix year after year to spend their winters in the brilliant sunshine and balmy air of the Salt River valley, always start out on their first walk through the streets, to see if the Big Curio Store is still in existence, as it has been for the past 25 years, and buy something native of Arizona for the folks at home. See Balke.

SAILOR, AHoy!

Try the Savoy for a night of joy. Hear the hands clap, there's fun on tap; the picturegraphs are full of laughs. The songs they sing have the right ring. A matinee every day, and every night the time is right, to be gay and see the play. Now hark the rest, our place is best, we have no fear our pictures clear, will bring you back if you'll tread this track—The Savoy.

ARIZONA SCREW FISH.

Are all right to stuff tenderloins on but the rest of the population consisting of cowboys, prospectors, real estate agents, and just plain folks prefer the kind that swim the salty sea and they have learned that Tribolet makes a specialty of the finny tribe, and their cousins also even if they are oysters and lobsters. Freshest of Meats and Vegetables as well at Tribolet Market.

NOTICE OF ANNUAL MEETING.

The regular annual meeting of the stockholders of The Vulcan Oil & Gas company will be held at the office of Roy S. Goodrich in the City of Phoenix, Arizona, on Monday, March 4th, 1912 at 2 o'clock P. M. for the purpose of electing a board of directors for the ensuing year and the transacting of such other business as may properly come before the meeting.

SPANISH BEAUTIES.

Come from Spain of course but so do the Spanish wines that Melzer Bros. sell. They also sell champagne from France and the rosy liquid that is a product of the vineyards of California. Old Bourbon from the land of thoroughbred horses, handsome girls and blue grass, with the rich, fine flavor of the sunshine and rye. Buy the best beer, Bourbon and Bubbles.

A PRESENT FOR PA.

Or ma or any other member of the family can be found at Hildebrand's where they have just received a large shipment of cut glass, of the most beautiful designs. But pa would rather have a watch chain of his new fraternal order, or that handsome hand painted Picard, Scotch decanter, with the plaid, thistle and escutcheon of the canny Highlander on it.

AGAIN SEE DIEHL.

Go again to Diehl and make your spiel and ask to see his slippers. Those satin shoes of various hues, most certainly are clippers. In high top boots, the miner scoots across the ore strewn hills; through heat or cold he hunts for gold to pay his big grub bills. Whether footless, Diehl don't care, he has it any way, for the best of goods, a moderate price is all you'll have to pay.

KEEP THE CHANGE

Sounds good to Sambo when you come to settle your pay check, and is a mighty good motto for any wage earner to adopt. Put your change in a savings bank and it will not only keep but will gain interest. If you carry your cash around in your jeans you will be bound to spend it if you don't lose it. Phoenix Savings Bank and Trust Co.

A FAMOUS WRITER.

Known to the readers of classic fiction as Thackeray, once said: "The world is a looking glass and gives back to every man the reflection of his own face" and one may truthfully add that a book store is the reflection of the literary taste of the community in which it is located. It speaks well for Phoenix that Berryhill's Big Book Store carries the works of the best writers, in both de luxe and plain editions.

BACK TO THE FARM.

Do you remember the hot bread that mother used to give us, right out of the oven, with butter from the jar down cellar, spread over it an inch thick? Don't it make your mouth water just to think of that bread? If you will buy your butter at the Farmer's Cooperative Creamery Co., (straight from the churn to the consumer) and get wifey to make some bread, you can give yourself an old time treat.

BEAUTY

Is only skin deep, according to the old adage, sometimes it is only paint deep. In that case it would be well to investigate the depth of the paint. The Velle Buggy has 14 coats and its beauty is a subject of comment to all who see it. Its springs are the kind that spring, they do not leave the occupant of the buggy seat to take the jolt. Ryan Vehicle Co.

FROM THE FIELD.

To the flour mill in S. R. V., that is the record of the wheat grown on the farms under the great Roosevelt dam. The Phoenix Flour Mills purchase the farmer's wheat and the farmer buys the miller's flour, the mother of the family or the baker at the shop, makes bread and cake and pies. These products of the culinary art are eaten by the man who tills the farm to raise more wheat. Cooperation.

Some opulent force of nature, soul and

Some deep life-current from far centuries
Flowed to his mind, and lightened
his sad eyes,
And gave his name, among great names, high place.
But these are miracles we may not trace—
Nor say why from a source and lin-

He rose to grandeur never dreamt

AMERICAN INDEPENDENCE

One reason given by world travelers for the spirit of independence noticeable in America is the fact that so many own their homes. The easy payment plan of 10 per cent down and 1 per cent a month means that you can own a home and the Home Builders will buy the lot and build to suit.
